26. – 28. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

An extremophile is an organism that lives best in extreme environments. The name extremophile comes from Latin word extremus meaning “extreme” and Greek word philia meaning “love”. They were discovered in the 1980s. Extremophiles are not complex organisms like humans, cats or trees. They are microbes. There are many different types of extremophiles. They are classified according to the environments they live in; for example, acidophiles live best in acidic environments and thermophiles live best at temperatures between 45-120°C. Some types of extremophiles don't even need oxygen to live. Scientists still discover new types of extremophiles. A recent research showed that some of the extremophiles become stronger in conditions that don't exist on Earth. According to some scientists, result of this research is evidence that those particular organisms came to Earth from outer space. Some even think that life originated on Earth with extremophiles that came to our planet on an asteroid.

26. We learn from the passage that ----.

- A) extremophiles are extremely dangerous organisms
- B) Earth is always the best place for extremophiles to live
- C) there are only two different kinds of extremophiles
- D) life would be impossible without extremophiles

29. – 31. soruları aşağıdaki parçaya göre cevaplayınız.

When there is deflation, this means that the prices of goods and services are going down. It is the opposite of inflation. In other words, it is negative inflation. Deflation seems like a good thing to happen, but it is actually bad for the economy. Most economists think it is even worse than inflation. Why is it so bad? People spend less money when there is deflation. This means companies earn less money. When the companies don't earn enough money to pay their workers' salaries, they start to fire workers. This increases the number of unemployed people. When people lose their jobs, they try to spend even less money. This brings us to the beginning. Governments try to solve the problem of deflation by decreasing taxes. That way, companies earn enough money even when they sell their goods for less. Governments don't like deflation because it means they collect less tax money. Because of that, they prefer a low inflation, not a negative inflation.

29. It is stated in the passage that ----.

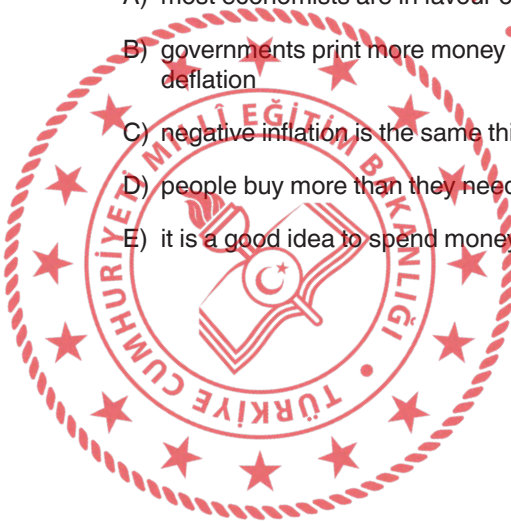

- A) most economists are in favour of deflation
- B) governments print more money to deal with deflation
- C) negative inflation is the same thing as deflation
- D) people buy more than they need during deflation
- E) it is a good idea to spend money during deflation

30. We understand from the passage that ----.

- A) governments don't like economists
- B) we pay more for the same services during deflation
- C) economists collect less tax money during deflation
- D) governments decrease taxes to end deflation
- E) tax money is the only income for governments

31. According to the passage, the number of unemployed people ----.

- A) never changes during deflation
- B) is not related to deflation
- C) increases during deflation because companies can't pay to their workers
- D) affects how well economists earn
- E) is the main concern of a government during deflation
